President's Report

We know spring cannot be far off once the Dundee flower baskets have been planted. Of course, it being 85 degrees is also a pretty good hint that hopefully winter is gone for good. I want to thank all of the volunteers who showed up to plant 475 flower baskets on March 9 and 10. Everyone had a good time and the new tool for making the holes for the begonias really increased our productivity. I especially want to thank Jen Goodman for doing such a great job organizing the planting. The food and drinks for the volunteers were graciously donated by neighborhood eateries Varsity Sports Cafe, Amsterdam and Mark's Bistro. Please be sure to support these restaurants who support our neighborhood.

Now that the baskets have been planted, it is not too early to be thinking about volunteering for the water brigade. All of the work that has been done so far will go for naught if the baskets are not watered and fertilized. This is a great way to give back to your neighborhood and you get to drive a truck with a flashing light! Dan Rock is looking for volunteers so give him a call at 402-558-4913.

Another sign of spring is our annual neighborhood spring clean up. This year the City has scheduled Dundee-Memorial Park for Saturday, April 14th. This is a great opportunity to clean out the garage or basement. Additional details are in the newsletter. I want to thank Tom Craig for his work on organizing this event and Peter Manhart for helping out. They are always looking for volunteers for the 14th. So if you have some time to help, please contact Tom Craig at 402-612-1444.

Dundee-Memorial Park Association recently applied for a grant with the Kiewit Foundation to complete our Historic Dundee street signs. We received notice in March that the Kiewit Foundation has awarded us a grant of $4,500 to complete this project. This grant will provide enough funding to complete this project by having decorative iron sign posts fabricated and installed at 8 entrance locations to our neighborhood. The posts are currently being made which will take about 2 months to complete. The goal is to have the signs installed by September. We are very appreciative of the generous support of the Kiewit Foundation.

President's Message

Since we have a primary election approaching in May, the General Association meeting on April 9th will be your chance to come and meet the candidates running in the primary election. In past years, we have had forums where candidates come and speak to everyone for 5 minutes. Anyone who has attended any of those forums knows they can be very long and it is really not fair to the candidates who are last. This year we are going to try something different by having all of the candidates available for residents to individually question. This will allow people to talk to the candidates they wish to question and allow candidates more opportunity to contact residents one on one. At this point, we have 18 candidates running for offices from Congress to NRD who have said they will be present. Please note the change in starting time to 7:00 pm so that everyone will have enough time to talk to the candidates. Please plan on attending and be sure to let your friends and neighbors know about this opportunity.

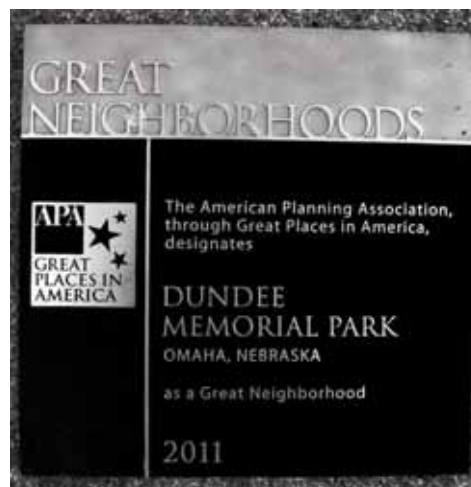

Finally, we continue to work on addressing the graffiti problem with the Dodge Street tunnel at 51st Street. I have talked with Kaye Goetzinger, Principal at Dundee School, about doing a mural project in the tunnel with art students from Dundee and possibly other schools. Not only would it liven up the dreary tunnel, it might be a deterrent to future graffiti.

I hope to see you on April 9th for our Candidates' Forum.

Dave Schinzel

Great Neighborhoods in America Plaque Installed

Last October, the American Planning Association named Dundee-Memorial Park as a Great Neighborhood in America for 2011. In recognition of this honor, a bronze plaque has been installed at 50th & Underwood next to the World War II bombing and clock donor plaques. A special thanks to Al Haney for his generosity in allowing this plaque to be attached to his building. The next time you are at 50th & Underwood, be sure to stop and see this new addition to our neighborhood.

Spring Clean Up 2012

Location: Brownell Talbot School
400 North Happy Hollow Boulevard (Lower parking lot on the east side)

Date: Saturday, April 14, 2012
Time: 9 a.m. – 2 p.m.

Free disposal of bulky household waste and recycling of scrap metal and most electronics. Old style CRT type monitors and TV's that contain toxic materials like Mercury and lead will cost a nominal amount to divert them from the landfill. Visit the website to <http://www.edtreycling.com/> 402-898-5000

Certain items cannot be accepted at our site but are available at other sites on the same day. Tires can be taken to Boyd Elementary School and appliances can go to Hillside Elementary School. Any batteries, paints, liquids, oils, pesticides or other hazardous materials cannot be accepted at the site but these items can be disposed of at Under The Sink Special Waste Facility (402-444-sink).

If April 14th is not a convenient day for you to drop items off, there are locations around the city every Saturday between April 14th and May 19th, for more information on those locations please call the Spring Clean up Hotline at 402-444-4636.

Similar to years past, donations will be collected to benefit the A.V. Sorenson Library. To volunteer to help unload vehicles on April 14th email Tom Craig at tcraig@tenaska.com.

Meet “reEnergize” Omaha And Be Oh So Glad You Did! (I am)

By Molly Romero, Marks Bistro

This month, rather than a “Meet the Merchant” article, I am writing a “Meet reEnergize” article. Some months ago, I signed up for the reEnergize Program through the Omaha Planning Department. It was in response to a letter I received describing the program and informing me how to participate. The federal government has provided grant funds through the Department of Energy’s Better Buildings Neighborhood Program to 41 cities across the country, with Omaha and Lincoln (combined into one program) selected as participants.

The funds for the Omaha and Lincoln portion of the program total $10,000,000, with Omaha’s share just over $6.6million. The funds are designated primarily for owner-occupied residences. The program goal is to have 2,100 residences among the Omaha and Lincoln programs upgraded by May 2013, and achieve an average of 25% savings on energy. Eric Williams, sustainability planner with the Omaha Planning Department, said that this is not an income qualification program; the benefits of this program are open to any homeowner who wishes to participate. For the Dundee-Memorial Park neighborhood, with so many older homes, it is a true boon to have this assistance in evaluating energy efficiency and determining what can be done to improve it.

The reEnergize program is acting as a catalyst to build consumer demand for energy efficiency upgrades, provide a qualified contractor pool for energy improvements, and to reduce energy use in local buildings. What I found very appealing is the qualified contractor pool. For me, I feel like I have hit the lottery when I have found a reliable, skilled, affordable, communicative, quality-conscious contractor, so the prescreening and quality assurances, cost-overrun protection truly got my attention.

So, when I received the letter describing the program, I enthusiastically registered to participate. Now, I love my old stucco home. It was built about 1916 – going on 100 years old – and has seen many changes. I have been living in it almost 33 years – and am still discovering things about it and how best to live in it.

The first step was a preliminary “Healthy Home” review, conducted by Omaha Healthy Kids (of Dundee), looking for any conditions that could impact air quality, health, comfort and safety, such as lead, mold and carbon monoxide. (If issues are found, the program administrators work with the homeowner on remediation solutions.) I passed the review without needing any remediation, then signed some paperwork that enrolled me formally into the program. At this point, I paid $250 into the program, to fund one-half the expense of the energy evaluation, which was the next step.

For the energy audit, a highly professional team of two arrived and examined heating, air conditioning, water heater, gas stove, windows, doors, refrigerator, lighting and many other factors, even crawling into the attic/crawl space (to check insulation) that has not seen a human for decades. Then they conducted the home’s leakage evaluation. This was fascinating. They opened the front door, inserted a temporary plastic, flexible and expandable door with a round, three-foot opening in it at floor level, into which they placed a fan blowing air out of the house creating a vacuum. We then walked through the house to feel where drafts were coming in – and there were drafts.

After the evaluators analyzed their findings, they put them on a spread sheet with suggested upgrades, the amount of energy each improvement would save (in kwh or therms), the cost of the improvement, and the number of years (to two decimal points) it would take to recover each upgrade expense. The program administrators emailed it to me for my consideration. This was the time when I would learn what work would be done, how much I would save on utilities, how much it would cost me, and how many years it would take for me to recover the cost of the improvements. I was very eager to see the results.

The evaluators assured me that my heating and cooling systems were efficient and did not need to be replaced. Even my refrigerator is energy efficient enough to keep using until it dies. Where I would get the biggest bang for my buck was in insulation, sealing up the house (blocking air leaks), putting an insulation blanket over the hot water heater and adjacent hot water pipes, and changing to energy-efficient light bulbs – yes light bulbs DO make a difference! (I was getting an education to boot!)

Without this program, this would be a huge task for me to do – to find a reputable and skilled contractor or subcontractor and to know what would be a fair price, and do all the scheduling and coordinating. Yes, even changing the light bulbs was not as simple as I first thought. A lighting expert gave me an education in the current lighting options. The beauty of the program is that the administrators did all that work for me. In addition, a huge advantage was that I had no concern for cost overruns (as when something does not go as planned, as often happens in older homes), because once I committed to the specific improvements, my investment was fixed and I was guaranteed it would not cost me more than the agreed upon price.

But that is not all. My expenditure was one-half the cost of the improvements, with the other half paid by the program. So, I was told what needed to be done, how much I would save, how much it would cost, and then that amount was cut in half for me. (There are several formulae in use, so not all program participants will have such a simple formula.)

“reEnergize” Continued

The goal of the program is to achieve an average 25% reduction among all the homes participating in the program, and my spread sheet estimated my savings would be 30%, for a dollar amount of $551 savings per year, recovering my investment in 6.4 years. (If 2,100 homes saved $551 a year, the total energy expense saved would be almost $1.2 million a year – not to mention the environmental impact or improved comfort!)

Once I gave the go ahead, and funded my share of the upgrade expense, it went very quickly. I was curious to know how they would insulate all the outside walls – and the exposed floor in my bedroom. They drilled about two-inch holes in the walls every 16 inches and with two hoses, pumped liquid foam insulation into the walls, and in the back porch ceiling. They assured me that I would not be able to see the patches, even though I had multiple kinds of textures on the interior walls. They were right! When they were finished, I could not see any variation in texture, and the paint that had been on the walls for years was matched perfectly.

One of my upstairs bedrooms is a yoga room, where I do yoga with friends. The day the insulation was pumped in, we had a yoga session, and they all noticed a difference – no drafts, warmer floor, warmer walls, cozier. (It was a cold day – remember what winter feels like?) I needed no further proof. It was a wise thing to do. All the professionals who worked with me were very accommodating, communicative, courteous, and skilled craftsmen. I was in very good hands, and now when the wind blows cold, I will be comfy in my newly reEnergized home.

The program has recently been opened to all Omaha homeowners, expanded from its initial limited geographic boundaries. The program has also been stream-lined, and Eric Williams said that from enrollment to completion of work, it is going much faster, working toward a two- to four-week process. I am amazed that they have built such a network of contractors and specialists that are working so efficiently together and getting so much work done. There is also a program for commercial properties, which assists in energy evaluation, but does not include subsidized improvements. For Dundee-Memorial Park area homes, this is a wonderful opportunity to find out what we can do to increase the comfort of our homes, save money and energy, and receive significant financial and logistical assistance in making it happen. You may contact the program, by email at info@reEnergizeProgram.org, by phone at 877-402-5111, or check out the information on line at www.reEnergizeProgram.org. The program ends May 2013, and all work must be completed by that time. There are no indications it will be extended or repeated, so if you want to explore how to improve your energy efficiency and obtain some financial assistance in getting it done, now is the time to act.

They have voracious appetites. They damage your home and cause havoc. They annoy and confound you. Your teenagers? Well, maybe, but this time we're talking about carpenter ants.

According to a local exterminator, the mild temperatures last winter didn't kill off as many carpenter ants as usual. Which means these pesky little creatures that are common in our neighborhood anyway are more plentiful this year.

Carpenter ants vary in size and color but are usually large (1/4-1/2 inch) and blackish. Besides being objectionable by their presence, carpenter ants damage wood by hollowing it out for nesting. They excavate galleries in wood, which have a smooth, sandpapered appearance. Wood, which has been damaged by carpenter ants, contains no mud-like material, as is the case with termites. Shredded fragments of wood, similar in appearance to coarse sawdust, are ejected from the galleries through preexisting cracks or slits made by the ants. When such accumulations are found (typically containing dead ants and bits of insects which the carpenter ants have eaten), it's a good indication that a carpenter ant nest is nearby. Oftentimes, however, the excavated sawdust remains hidden behind a wall or in some other concealed area.

Carpenter ants nest in both moist and dry wood, but prefer wood which is moist. Consequently, the nests are more likely to be found in wood dampened by water leaks, such as around sinks, bathtubs, poorly sealed windows/ door frames, roof leaks and poorly flashed chimneys. Nests are especially common in moist, hollow spaces such as the wall void behind a dishwasher, or in a hollow porch column.

Carpenter ants may establish nests in a number of different locations. It is important to realize that these locations can be either inside or outside the structure.

Although large carpenter ant colonies are capable of causing structural damage, the damage is not normally as serious as that from termites. In some cases, the damage may be relatively insignificant, but this can only be determined by locating and exposing the nest area.

The best way to control carpenter ants is to find and destroy the nests. When carpenter ants are observed, don't spray them; instead, feed the ants small dabs of diluted honey placed onto the back (nonsticky side) of pieces of masking tape. The best time to do this is late at night since this is when carpenter ants are most active. After the ants have fed on the honey, follow them on their journey back to their nest. Be patient-- eventually the ants will disappear behind a baseboard, cabinet, or into some other concealed location such as the hollow space (void) within a wall, door casing, or porch column.

Treat wall voids and other hidden spaces where ants are entering by carefully drilling a series of small (1/8 inch) holes and puffing boric acid (available at most hardware stores) into the suspected nest areas. The boric acid powder will disperse in the hidden void and contact and kill the ants. If you suspect the nest is in a wall, drill and treat at least 3-6 feet on either side of where ants are entering so as to maximize the chances of contacting the nest. Carpenter ants prefer to travel along wires, pipes and edges. If you suspect the nest location is in a wall, also treat behind pipe collars and behind --not in-- the junction box for electrical switch plates/receptacles. NEVER SPRAY LIQUIDS OR INSERT METAL-TIPPED DEVICES AROUND ELECTRICAL OUTLETS!

Carpenter ants seen in the home may actually be nesting outdoors, foraging indoors for food and/or moisture. Consequently, you may end up following the ants you have baited with honey out of the house and into the yard, possibly to a nest located in a stump, or under a log or railroad tie. Once the outdoor nest is discovered, treatment can be performed by spraying or drenching the nest with an insecticide such as carbaryl (Sevin) or diazinon, Oftentimes, it will be difficult or impossible to locate and destroy the carpenter ant nest(s). In this case, you may need to call a professional pest control operator. Pest control companies approach carpenter ant problems differently. Some attempt to locate the nest and selectively treat only in specific areas. Other companies take more of a "shot-gun" approach, drilling and dusting as many potential wall voids and nesting sites as possible. Most companies also apply a perimeter spray treatment around the outside foundation of the home in an effort to temporarily prevent reinvasion. The approach that should not be used is simply to spray each month where carpenter ants are seen. If no effort is made to locate the nest(s) or probable nest areas, the problem will most likely continue.

Typically, there will be wide differences in price depending on the company and amount of effort expended. Since carpenter ant problems are not always solved on the first attempt, the type of guarantee and reputation of the company should be factored into the purchasing decision.

A number of steps can be taken by homeowners to reduce the potential for future carpenter ant problems.

1. Correct roof leaks, plumbing leaks and other moisture problems which will attract carpenter ants.
2. Eliminate wood-to-ground contact such as where landscaping has moved soil or mulch up against the wood siding of a home.

3. Clip back tree limbs and vegetation touching the roof or siding of the house. Limbs and branches serve as "bridges" between carpenter ants nesting in a dead tree limb and the structure.
  4. Seal cracks and openings in the foundation, especially where utility pipes and wires enter from the outside.
  5. Stack firewood away from the foundation and elevate it off the ground. Never store firewood in the garage or other areas of the home, as firewood is a prime nesting area for carpenter ants.
